"Fair and Warmer," that anti-prohibition day farce, hilarious, cleves and amusing, kept an audience at the Garrick on its toes all last evening. and abetted by the old favorites, who have been here since early in the season, the farce went speedily and without a hitch. wants a continual round of pleasure, opera, theater and dance On the floor above are their friends, the Wheelers. Mrs. Wheeler is of the mousey, stay-at-home type, while her husband wants to gad around a bit. A different shuffling of the cards by the dealer who stacks the deck in the marriage game might have hitched the two couples differently, but then the farce would never have been

Jack Wheeler is off for an evening with the boys, while Mrs. Bartlett is bound for the opera with Philip Evans, an old flame of hers.

Billy Bartlett has been too good to his wife, too steady and home-like, and she announces to him that she is soon to seek her freedom. With this for a start, the two families get together. And then the fun began. Mr. Bartlett and Mrs. Wheeler decide that they will show their respective spouses that they can play the same game, and the two innocents plan to get compromised.

Finding it hard to stay awake, they concoct a wondrous cocktail, missing nothing in the long list of drinkables. The result is inevitable, and they get very, very "happy." The respective spouses return, and find them so, and the remainder of the play is devoted to explanations that, happily, leave all n a loving mood.

The brunt of the work is done by nail as Billy Bartlett, and Nell Barnes as Mrs. Wheeler. Silvernail and Miss Barnes were both excellent in their parts, and the thoroughly natural way in which they played the part of the dramatic highlight of a long and compelling array of program selections, both photographic and musical. "The Ladder of Lies," based on a story by Harold Vickers in Snappy Stories, was directed by Tom Forman, the well-known photopiay actor, who makes his directoral debut in this production. The supporting cast surrounding Miss Clayton is particularly notable and includes Irving Cum-mings, Charles Meredith, Jane Acker and others. In narrative, "The Ladder of Lies" reveals the story of a woman's selfsacrifice to protect the happiness of a friend who has offered to another woman the marriage vows that she would not accept. The wife, how-ever, is a woman of shallow, sentimental character and the nuptial vows are hardly said before she has contracted an "affair," using the girl's studio as a rendezvous.

Determined to sacrifice for the sake of her friend and to shield him from unhappiness if possible, the girl, played by Miss Clayton, even accepts the stigma and the blame for a piece of misconduct of which she was guilt less, but which links her identity suit and being herself the knocked- narrowly averts a misunderstanding that bids fair to shatter her own
